HISTORY OF AFTERNOON TEA

Anna The 7th Duchess of Bedfordshire first introduced Afternoon Tea circa 1840. In that era there were primarily two main meals in the day, those being breakfast and dinner. The duchess would bemoan her hunger early in the afternoon. As a result of this the duchess would exclusively receive a pot of tea and light snacks in her boudoir in order to suffice one's appetite. Excitedly she began to invite other members of royalty and high society to join her. The concept was even introduced to Queen Victoria. It became so popular that the name derived from the table height on which the meals were served. Today, one can look forward to indulging on fine tea selections, lively chit chat and luxury light snacks. An occasional luxury linked to British tradition.

OUR STORY

The Fairways is one of Dundalk's most iconic hotels. Built during the 1960s, the hotel was a popular venue for locals and passing trade. The Fairways was the first hotel in the town of Dundalk to operate a swimming pool. The Original site consisted of 22 Acres of land and boasted a fairy fort complete with a conservation order. The hotel has in the past had a number of previous owners who have added to its history and offering over the years, some of which had owned other hotels within Dundalk town. Most notable was the development of the night club known as Studio 8 which held up to 700 people on any given night. From 2013 – 2019 the doors of this well-loved hotel remained closed. The hotel has since been newly renovated and reopened as of 2019 with a huge investment of €12 million by its current owners. The hotel now boasts 113 spacious bedrooms and state of the art conference facilities.
